ARENDSVILLE

Boy Scouts of the Gettysburg district in the York-Adams area will stage a camporee on Thursday and Friday at the South Mountain fair grounds, near Arendtsville, with Ray F. Zane, York, area scout executive, and other scout leaders in attendance. The camporee is one of a series being held this week by all districts in the two-county area.

The camporee will open at 2:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon and end at 11 o'clock the next morning.

The local district scouts will go on the overnight camping trip by patrol and will operate in patrol units under the leadership of the individual patrol leaders. Each troop in the district will have one or more patrols at the camporee.

The various patrols will be graded upon their performances. Competitive events include tent pitching and cooking meals. On Thursday evening there will be a campfire and entertainment program.

Only patrols that make a required number of points will be eligible for the area camporee to be conducted on a farm south of Abbotstown on June 16 and 17. That camporee is to be a demonstration of the best kind of patrol camping. Each patrol will be scored by competent judges. Patrols qualifying with more than 850 points will be awarded standard camper medals for each member.

OATS AFFECTED
MOST BY LACK OF RAINFALL

Philadelphia, June 7 (AP).—Drought conditions are "becoming serious" in the greater portion of the state, the weather bureau weekly report on crop conditions in Pennsylvania stated today.

Local showers in a few southwestern counties brought relief to some very dry regions.

"Corn is still mostly in a healthy condition," the report stated, "but is growing very slowly. Good rains would put the crop in fine condition.

Winter wheat is beginning to need moisture, but its condition to date is not unfavorable.

"Oats is generally suffering severely from the drought, and it is believed that a large portion of the crop has been damaged beyond recovery."

"Pastures and meadows are apparently suffering more from the drought than anything else excepting oats. Cattle have been removed from the pastures in some regions, and the grass seems to be dormant. Clover and timothy are short and thin, and much of the first crop is hardly worth the cutting. Alfalfa is fair to good, and the first cutting is in progress under favorable conditions, with practically no losses in curing."

"Early potatoes are generally looking good, but are growing slowly. Good soaking rains would improve the crop."

"Orchard fruits are mostly fair to good. Apples continue falling from trees, but is not believed that this means much loss in the good commercial varieties."

Thomas Urges Banks to Boost
Public Relations Program

"The Great Need in Banking Today," was the subject of a talk delivered by Edmund W. Thomas, of Gettysburg, before the Kiwanis club in Lewistown, Tuesday evening.

Mr. Thomas, who is president of the First National bank of Gettysburg, spoke in part as follows:

"The great need of banking today is unquestionably better public relations sustained and supported by better and more intelligent banking."

"I am fully aware of the fact that there is and there can be no substitute for good management. Good management in banking calls for courage and knowledge. Sound policies and practices are definitely a prerequisite. Great care and intelligent judgment in the matter of granting credit and painstaking study and an abundance of research backed by experience in the purchase of investment securities are simply indispensable in the management of a bank today. Banking has grown up; it has become a profession. It is no longer an avocation. It is a full-time, year-around vocation."

"Unfortunately it so happens that only too often, we have been so intent upon and engrossed in the mechanics of better banking that we have lost sight of the importance of public relations—a better understanding between ourselves and our customers."

"Let us all be alert to tell our customers more about our banks and our banking system; what a bank is and what it is not, and what a bank can do and what it cannot do. When the man outside of the counter knows more about the inside of the counter, it will become a much easier, more pleasant task for the man behind the counter to run a bank as it should be run—from the inside and not from the outside of the counter. The rank and file of the American people are fair and honest. Let us be both frank and courageous in our dealings with them. Let us give good reasons—not apologies—for sound policies. Let us ignore unwholesome competition. You, the customer, can help your bank in carrying out policies of this kind by giving them your whole-hearted and active co-operation."

"Our banks are sound; they are generally well managed. With sound practical supervisory policies, they have a real future under private ownership. Let us protect and preserve the American system of banking—dual banking—with unit banks throughout every state in the Union."

Chairman Thomas (D-Utah) halted Witte to one point to ask if he believed in collective bargaining. "I don't believe that collective bargaining is the be-all and end-all in labor relations," the witness replied. "I think individual bargaining is just as important."

The witness said that if congress were fair it would require that employers not discriminate against non-union workers, just as the labor act prohibits discrimination against union workers.

"Just because a man has a union card in his pocket does not give him any more constitutional rights," the business man declared.

CLAIM W. P. A. FUNDS
PUT TO PRIVATE USE

Philadelphia, June 7 (AP).—Testimony of seven W.P.A. workers that they were paid with federal checks for work done on State Senator Joseph P. Dando's private amusement park at Llewellyn was before a federal court jury today at the trial of Dando and eight others on fraud charges. STOCK REPORT

New York, June 7 (AP).—Buying in numerous specialties gave the stock market strength for a continuation today of a slow advance. Gains ranged from more than two points near midday in American Telephone, Union Carbide, Owens Illinois-Glass and Allied Chemical. Resumption of "investment" buying on a moderate scale was reported in some brokerage circles. Trading remained quiet, however, with dealings at times barely sufficient to keep the ticker moving.

GETTYSBURG IS ASKED TO SEND
FOLDERS TO FAIR

Gettysburg is one of the towns and communities in Pennsylvania that have been urged to furnish literature for free distribution in the Pennsylvania building at the New York World's fair by Richard P. Brown, secretary of the new Department of Commerce.

Secretary Brown has made arrangements with Pennsylvania's State World's Fair commission to give away at least a half million pieces of printed matter in the Pennsylvania building to visitors who show an interest in what the Keystone state has to offer to tourists. The literature will receive careful distribution under the direction of Mrs. Josephine Foster Bright. The local Chamber of Commerce folder is expected to be furnished for distribution.

Each community is urged to mail sample pieces of literature to the Department of Commerce, Harrisburg, for approval.

"In addition to the distribution of approximately 200,000 maps and folders furnished by the Department of Commerce, we expect to make at least 300,000 pieces of community printed matter available to fair visitors," said Commerce Secretary Brown. He explained, however, that community printed matter to be distributed must be free of private advertising.

Mrs. Bright, who is assistant general manager of the Pennsylvania building, finds that fair visitors show an unusual interest in Pennsylvania literature. Many people from the south and west make known that they traveled through Pennsylvania enroute to the fair and were so favorably impressed with the state that they expect to do some sight-seeing and vacationing on their return trip home.

Eshelman
Not Bound
For Europe

Chester L. Eshelman, 22, of Carlisle, who was rescued 175 miles off the Atlantic coast from Boston on Tuesday when the plane he was piloting sank, is shown above. He formerly resided at McKnightstown R. D. He also was a former member of a Gettysburg Boy Scout troop.

Ex-Countian Held;
He Will "Face
The Music"

Boston, June 7 (AP).—Still insisting he was headed for Mars, Chester L. Eshelman, 22-year-old student flier from Carlisle, Pa., returned to dry land today only to be arrested for larceny of the airplane which sank when he was fished from the Atlantic, 175 miles from shore, Tuesday.

"My only destination was Mars—the planet Mars," Eshelman grinningly told reporters aboard the police boat which took him from the trawler Villanova in the harbor. "I had no intention of flying to Europe."

"What were you going to do there?" he was asked. "You've got me there, I wouldn't know what to do on Mars," Eshelman replied.

Police said Eshelman had only 55 cents in cash on his person and that his food supply consisted of two chocolate bars and a few sandwiches. They said the flier told them eight cartridges found in his pockets fitted a pistol which sank with the plane.

To "Face the Music"

Indicating he would not fight extradition, police quoted Eshelman as saying: "I think I'll give in and go back and face the music." Inspector Paul Crowley and Lt. James Crowley handcuffed the youth, who had made only one solo flight previous to his unorthodox hop from Camden, New Jersey, Monday night, and took him to headquarters to await the arrival of New Jersey police.

Edward Walz, of Camden, owner of the plane, which Eshelman said he rented for an hour, obtained a larceny warrant against Eshelman Tuesday night and asked Boston police to arrest him. Civil aeronautics authority officials at Camden airport said his arrest also would be sought for four possible violations of civil aeronautics authority regulations.

Attired in a natty one-piece flying outfit with a white silk scarf knotted around his neck, Eshelman reported the plane sank eight minutes after he panicked it down in the water near the Villanova Tuesday morning.

He said he did not know he was over the water until dawn because of "fog—black and soupy." Then he asked the trawler Storm for directions to land but failed to see the painted directions on her pilot house. He headed out to sea and about an hour later landed near the Villanova.

Picked up on Georges banks, Eshelman was not hurt but Captain Astman Bjartmarz, Icelandic skipper of the trawler Villanova, which carried the flier to port, said he was suffering from shock and exhaustion.

Captain Bjartmarz said Eshelman reported vibration caused a break in a gas line, after he had flown blind (Continued on Page Two)

NAWAKWA WILL OPEN 11TH YEAR
SOON; PLAN TO ERECT CHAPEL

With early enrollment already pointing to an attendance equalling last year's record camp, preparations are going forward at Nawakwa, the Lutheran Leadership Training camp, for the opening of the camp's eleventh year on June 19. Last summer about 1,300 persons attended various divisions of the camp, which is located near Brysonia.

This year, Miss LaVene Grove, Harrisburg, is serving as religious director of the camp, with the Rev. Marshall E. Brenneman of the Lutheran Theological seminary at Gettysburg as associate director. Miss Grove succeeds Dr. M. Hadwin Fischer, organizer and first camp director, who died suddenly last August.

To Erect Chapel

Plans have been announced for the erection of "a churchly place of worship" at the camp in memory of Doctor Fischer. The chapel in the woods will be built of native rock and the trees and shrubs on the camp grounds. There will be a memorial altar. The chapel will be placed at a point which Doctor Fischer often pointed out to co-workers as that on which he hoped some day would be erected an altar before which Nawakwans could worship.

Gifts for the memorial fund are being received by M. E. Knoose, Arendtsville. No announcement has been made of the time when the memorial is to be constructed or dedicated.

The camp schedule for this year follows:

Junior boys aged 10 and 11 years and intermediate boys from 12 to 14 years, June 19 to 26.

Junior girls, 10 and 11 years old, and intermediate girls, 12 to 14 years, June 26 to July 3.

Intermediate girls, second camp, July 3 to 10.

Senior boys, 15 to 18 years, July 11 to July 24.

Senior girls, 15 to 18 years, July 25 to August 7.

Young people and leadership training, August 14 to 26.

Standard courses in Old and New Testaments, the purpose and program of the church, church history, teaching methods, missions, worship, youth guidance and school and church administration are offered and lead to diplomas.

The camp program is intended to meet the mental, physical, social and religious needs of the pupils who enroll.

The present officers of the Nawakwa Alumni association, which now is numbered by the thousands, are: President, the Rev. Mr. Brenneman; vice president, John D. Foerster, Johnstown; secretary, Miss Myra Cook, Flora Dale, and treasurer, Miss Betty Bupp, York. There is an executive committee serving the association and the organization has representatives in counties in each of the nine districts in Pennsylvania, Maryland and New Jersey which are covered by the camp.

VETS ELIGIBLE FOR STATE AID

The office of the Adams county chapter of the Red Cross which has on hand application forms for the Pennsylvania state bonus for Spaniards, Philippine and World war veterans has been advised of an extension in the time limit for bonus applications from July 1, 1938, to July 1, 1942.

Men who held legal residence in Pennsylvania while they saw active service during the Spanish American war between April and August, 1898; in the Philippines or Guam between April 21, 1898, and July 4, 1902, or in the World war between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, are eligible to apply for the state bonus if they served 90 days and received an honorable discharge.

If the veterans are deceased their un-re-married widows, minor children or father or mother may apply. Similar conditions are announced in an extension for veterans who held residence in Kansas at the time of their service. Their extension is to January 1, 1940.

The Red Cross secretary can supply the blanks for the Pennsylvania veterans and will give assistance to veterans of other states.

GERMANY GIVES 2 MORE PACTS TO KEEP PEACE

(By the Associated Press)
Germany today added two nations—Estonia and Latvia—to the group with which she has exchanged pledges to refrain from any aggression.

Adolf Hitler's newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, termed the two new pacts a "drastic answer" to President Roosevelt's peace appeal of April 15 asking Hitler for assurances that he had no aggressive designs against 31 listed nations.

Similar pacts already have been signed with Denmark and Lithuania. Three other northern nations, Norway, Sweden and Finland, responded to offers of such treaties by declaring they preferred to preserve their neutrality by remaining aloof from connections with any bloc of nations.

The two new pacts were signed in Berlin by the foreign ministers of Estonia, Latvia and Germany.

Additional interest was centered on the Baltic states by the communist party newspaper, Pravda, which declared in Moscow that a promise of mutual assistance to three Baltic nations was one of the conditions set forth in the Soviet Russian reply to British-French mutual assistance pact proposals.

The newspaper confirmed that a formal reply had been sent to the proposals which Premier Vyacheslav Molotov informally rejected last Wednesday as inadequate.

Russia wants guarantees to her Baltic neighbors, Latvia, Estonia and Finland, similar to the pledges France and Britain already have given to other Russian neighbors—Poland and Rumania.

In Rome, meanwhile, Premier Mussolini gave a smiling but silent welcome to 6,000 soldiers of the Spanish war who paraded before him. Half were Spanish troops on a visit to Italy and half were a part of the 20,000 Italians who returned home Tuesday from helping the Spanish nationalists.

HEAR DATA ON WPA ROAD COSTS

Washington, June 7 (AP)—The house committee investigating the W.P.A. heard testimony today that the relief agency spent about $89,000 a mile for widening a highway between Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and Hazleton, Pa.—more than five times the estimated cost of similar construction by private contractors.

Allen W. Stephens, Treasury department engineer assigned to the committee, testified the 22-mile project cost $1,960,611.

He asserted $365,000 would have been a very large cost had the work been done by private contract.

Questioned as to the reason for the larger W.P.A. cost, Stephens said the project originally called for construction of three-foot shoulders on each side of the road but that about two years after its commencement the state Highway department changed the plans to provide for addition of two extra lanes.

This necessitated tearing out retaining walls already built and "doing considerable of the work more than once," he said.

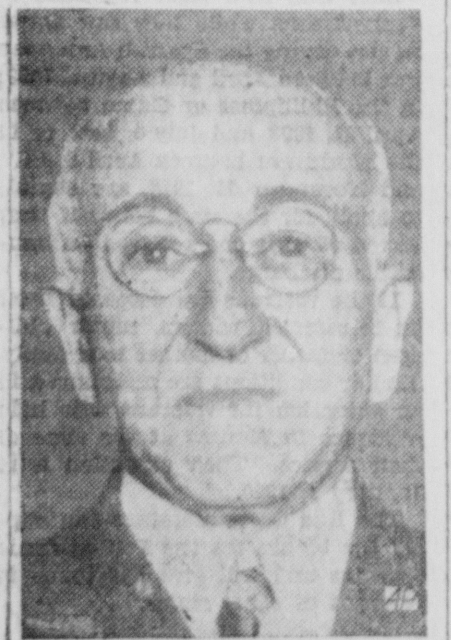

Stephens testified he was informed by state W.P.A. officials that "a very considerable amount"—later placed at $235,000—was spent during the first year of the project for snow removal and payment of workers for time lost due to inclement weather.

"You mean they were paid when not working?" asked Representative Ditter (R-Pa.).

"Yes, sir."

In response to questions by J. O'Connor Roberts, committee counsel, Stephens said payment of workers for time lost due to weather conditions had been the policy of the W.P.A. until about a year ago. He said the Pennsylvania state administration had informed him this policy had been established under a presidential order.

There is neither water nor air on the moon.

Eshelman Not Bound For Europe

in a fog all night, which prevented use of his reserve stock of gasoline.

After taking off from Camden, the young flier, landed on a farm at Hallowell, Pa., 18 miles north of Philadelphia, and picked up 50 gallons of gasoline. Nils Hedin, the farmer, quoted Eshelman as saying he intended to fly "out west."

The youth's mother, Mrs. Bertha M. Eshelman, happy that her son had been rescued, said he had "been excited about the flights of Corrigan and other trans-Atlantic fliers."

Douglas Corrigan also took off for "out west" last year but landed safely in Ireland.

Charles Kulp, attorney for Walz, said the warrant obtained by his client charged Eshelman with unlawful use of the plane, its radio and blind flying equipment.

Paul Burwell, inspection officer at Camden airport, said it was possible Eshelman had violated four different civil aeronautics authority rulings. He could be fined $1,000 on each count and could have his flying license revoked permanently.

Eshelman was taken off the Villanova by Inspector Crowley about ten minutes away from her pier, after a chase up the harbor that lasted more than six minutes. The trawler's skipper apparently was unaware the police boat wanted him to stop until he heard several whistle blasts.

The police boat had been cruising the incoming ship channel for more than two hours before the Villanova appeared.

The Villanova's crew said Eshelman clung first to a wing of his ship and when that went under water he scrambled back to the tail, which was the last part to sink. The plane had gone under and Eshelman was swimming along when a boat reached him, they said.

Asked how it happened that a course through Boston and St. John, N. B., was plotted on the scrap of chart on which he wrote his request for directions, Eshelman denied he had any such course in mind and declared the paper was "simply some old map."

To suggestions that he might have been influenced by recent attempts to span the Atlantic in small, single-motored ships, Eshelman had a short answer:

"That's a bunch of boloney."

Farm Calendar

Specialists in ornamental horticulture recommend proper support for peony plants to prevent bending when the blooms open. Ants gathering on peony buds merely gather the sticky substance on the buds.

Farmers and City Workers

Agriculture provides a market for the city worker, claim specialists. From him the farmer buys machinery, fertilizer, transportation, building supplies, as well as magazines, newspapers, books, and motion pictures.

Ensilaging Grasses and Legumes

Greater and more economical utilization of home-grown feeds is made possible by ensilaging grasses, clovers, alfalfa, soybeans and green cereals, say extension agronomists. Grass silages usually are high in protein and carotene, both of which are desired in dairy feeds.

As a vegetable grows, it requires more room, and this fact has prompted extension specialists in vegetable gardening to remind that too often gardeners fail to thin their crops. Thinning and high yields go hand in hand.

It is anticipated that approximately 5,000 farmers and others will attend

GIANTS HIT 5 HOMERS IN ONE INNING FOR MARK

By BILL WHITE
Associated Press Sports
Writer

Apparently you can tease a Giant so long and then he becomes a Giant.

Heckled by unhappy fans for wishy-washy hitting, the New York Giants rose Tuesday and answered all their critics with a seven home run attack that smashed two marks, tied three others and completely quashed the league leading Cincinnati Reds by 17-3.

Never have the majors seen anything like that fourth inning uprising when Harry Danning, Frank Demaree, Burgess Whitehead, Manuel Salvo and Joe Moore practically chased the customers out of the right field stands with a five blast bombardment.

That many home runs in one inning established a new record. And coupled with a pair of homers by Moore and Mel Ott earlier in the game tied the all-time mark for the most homers in one game. The fifteen extra bases gained in the barrage broke the 45-year-old record in the national league for the most extra bases on long hits in one inning and tied the American and major league mark. The last three homers of the inning, coming in succession, equaled another major league mark.

Over in the American league the Yankees continued to wallow hopelessly in a losing streak that has only one counterpart in the current American league race. The Yanks have lost two in a row for the first time since April.

Tuesday's second humiliation by the Detroit Tigers was by a 6-2 count. Buck Newsum, like Tommy Bridges the day before, limited the bombers to four hits.

Freddie Fitzsimmons hurled the Dodgers to a 5-2 triumph over the Pirates. Art Whitney singled in the ninth to score George Scharen with the Phillies' winning run over the Cubs in a 9-8 thriller, and at Boston a two-play error by Eddie Miller paved the way for the Cardinals to nip the Bees, 5-3, in the tenth inning.

In the American league the Cleveland Indians rallied in the last two innings to erase a five-run deficit and defeat the Red Sox, 8-7. Bill Dettich came back for the White Sox, after being belted out Sunday, and pitched and socked Chicago to a 7-4 win over the Athletics, and the Washington Senators smothered the St. Louis Browns with six runs in the last inning to win, 10-7.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

New York, June 7 (AP)—Branch Rickey of the Cardinals would like to put a national league football in St. Louis next year. . . . Harry Cooper is the red hot tip around Philly as the boys go to the post in the open. . . . You should see that shiner Joe Jacobs is carrying around. Says a floor lamp toppled against his orb. Haw! . . . Opening prices make Louis 1-9 to beat Galento; 1-6 to win by a kayo and even money to do it in three heats. . . . Washington fans have virtually given up and fear the first cellar finish in 30 years. Bonura and Al Simmons can't help but laugh.

One-minute interview — Charles Saulsberry, Oklahoma City Times: "Of course Oklahoma university would like to get out of the big six conference and go into the southwest. . . . The southwest is a much faster league and is much broader minded about such things as schedules, eligibility and bowl games."

The Ponte Vedra country club course has been stretched out to 6,829 yards for the November Ryder cup matches. . . . Eddie Mead says Joe Louis and Tommy Farr would do $700,000 in London if Farr beats Len Harvey for the British empire title. . . . Winter Haven (Florida) has offered the Giants $7,500 to train there. If Miami will match that offer they can get the Giants in ten minutes. . . . Pinkie George, Des Moines, leads the promoters and Joe Jacobs, Eddie Mead and Nate Lewis the fight managers in a popularity contest conducted by a Minneapolis boxing journal.

Today's guest star—Eddie Zelner, New York Mirror: "Lyn Lary doubled for his first Dodger hit and immediately succeeding in winning his 'B' by getting clipped off second base."

That sport coat Joe Louis dazzled you with at Baer vs. Nova set him back 75 cocoanuts. . . . Some of the best minds among the scribes say Joe McCarthy really can do something for baseball by winning the pennant by 30 games. . . . Then the rest of the American league might wake up and do something about it. F. D. R. may not choose to run in 1940, but Dick Roosevelt of the Shaker Heights (Cleveland) Roosevelt, will be out there galloping for Ohio university. . . . All this kid needs is a press agent and you can take that from your Uncle Charlie.

Yams vs. hams—Virginia schools are in a dither because Tennessee scouts stole across the line and grabbed that much-sought-after back. . . . The kid was offered all the hams in the state, but Tennessee must have said it with potatoes.

It was a break for Arndt Jorgens, Yankee third string catcher, when they picked him to play in the baseball centennial game. It probably will be the only time Arndt will put on a mask this season. . . . Johnny Paycheck, the Des Moines heavyweight toast, is drawing people who haven't been to fights in years and years. . . . 27 of those old-fashioned five-buck bills were in the till after his last two fights. . . . Joe Gould will find himself right in the middle when Braddock fights Farr. He's Braddock's manager and Farr's American representative.

Help, help—Connie Mack is looking for a neon-lighted score card to wave at his outfielders during those night games.

Adams Favors Name of Pennsylvania State Police

Harrisburg, June 7 (AP)—Major Lynn G. Adams, veteran member of the former state police and later its superintendent, intends to restore the old name to the now combined crime-detection and highway patrol unit.

Adams, who took over recently as commissioner of the motor police, said an effort would be made in the next legislative session to change the name of the 1,480-man force to the Pennsylvania state police.

That title would replace the present one, Pennsylvania motor police, and be only a slight departure from the original name of the criminal division, the state police.

Adams has expressed himself in favor of the merger of the two units but declared it wasn't carried out properly.

40,000 PLACED IN JOBS

Harrisburg, June 7 (AP)—The state employment service placed 40,000 persons in jobs this year, 80 per cent of them in private industry, Lewis G. Hines, secretary of Labor and Industry, reported today. Private placements in the week ended May 26 totaled 1,719. The active file of persons seeking work through the state employment offices contained 921,296 names.

KILLED CHASING BALL

Philadelphia, June 7 (AP)—Four-year-old James Weiss was killed by an automobile Tuesday as he chased a bouncing ball in a street. A 13-year-old brother was killed in a similar accident last year.

BYRD PREPARES FOR EXPEDITION

Washington, June 7 (AP)—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd told a house subcommittee, its records showed today, that he believed much of the Antarctic falls within the scope of the Monroe doctrine, thus binding the United States to resist European encroachment there.

Testifying in support of $340,000 appropriation for the government's projected expedition to substantiate United States claims to about 1,000,000 square miles of south Polar wastes, Byrd said:

"That peninsula which is called Palmer land, northernmost land of the Antarctic, is nothing more nor less than an extension of South America."

"It is only about 575 nautical miles from the tip of South America to Palmer land, and so this land falls naturally within the scope of the Monroe doctrine, as also should, in my opinion, most of Antarctica that lies within the western hemisphere."

He said that in "half a dozen nations" there is activity in connection with exploration and claiming of land in the Antarctic.

Representative Woodrum (D-Va.), acting chairman of the subcommittee, said he understood Byrd would head the forthcoming expedition.

Byrd testified the expedition would cost about $1,000,000, explaining additional funds would be sought from congress later.

He said he was raising about $100,000 privately and would donate the ship in which he made his previous journeys to the Antarctic, the Barkentine Bear of Oakland.

Richard P. Black, of the Interior department, told the subcommittee the expedition probably would sail about October 1 and might return in six and one-half months.

MEXICAN FLIER KILLED IN CRASH

Washington, June 7 (AP)—Francisco Sarabia, Mexican aviator who recently broke the non-stop record from Mexico City to New York, was killed today in taking off from Bolling field on a visit to his mother at Ciudad Lerdo, Durango.

His wife and their ten-year-old son, Francisco, Jr., who were watching the take-off with members of the Mexican embassy staff, saw him fall.

Four minutes after leaving the ground, the plane fell.

After two hours, a crane hauled in the ship which the young flier had dubbed "Conquistador Del Cielo"—the sky conqueror. His body was inside.

Sarabia came here Monday after an uneventful flight from New York. He had landed there from Mexico City with only one gallon of gasoline left in his tank.

An army doctor expressed the opinion Sarabia's neck was broken when the plane hit.

JEWISH REFUGEES START RETURN TO GERMANY

Miami, Fla., June 7 (AP)—Their aimless odyssey apparently ended, 907 Jewish refugees were reported on their way back to Germany today aboard the liner St. Louis, which wandered along the Florida coast for five days while welfare agencies sought to gain permission for them to land in Cuba.

Their hope crushed by the Cuban government's refusal for the second time to give them asylum, the victims of one of the strangest sagas of the sea renewed an appeal to President Roosevelt for last-minute intervention.

"Help them, Mr. President, the 900 passengers of which more than 400 are women and children," a passenger committee wirelessly from the big German liner.

WEDDINGS 47 YEARS APART

Lancaster, Pa., June 7 (AP)—After 47 years, there's to be a wedding at Mount Zion United Brethren church in the eastern end of Lancaster county. Furthermore, when Miss Dolores Mae Campbell and John N. Robinson say their vows there, they will be the second couple married in the church since it was built in 1881.

SMUGGLER KILLS 2 KIN AND SELF

Nogales, Ariz., June 7 (AP)—Fear that his smuggling would be disclosed drove Homer Adams, 22, to lure two relatives into his death trap, critically wound a third and kill himself while a cousin prayed for her life.

Sheriff J. J. Lowe said Adams, unemployed former relief worker, steeled himself for the brutal orgy by smoking narcotic cigarettes. He said Adams learned his family knew he had smuggled goods from Mexico and feared they would cause his arrest.

"The crimes were so brutal they could not have been committed by anyone not under influence of that nature," he said.

Adams enticed his brother, Eugene, 19, and cousin, Antonio Gonzalez, Jr., 20, to a desert spot near here Tuesday and shot them. He dumped their bodies under a cactus.

By the same ruse—a story that a relative had been injured—Adams lured Hector Gonzalez, another cousin, to the same spot, shot him in the head and left him for dead.

Hector managed to stumble to a residence and relate his fantastic story. Meantime, Adams was leading a fourth intended victim, 17-year-old Hortencia Gonzalez, into the desert. Miss Gonzalez was told she, too, would be killed. Instead Adams

By studying atmospheric disturbances around the sun and moon, Hoffner contends he can accurately foreshadow the approach of a storm. "When I find that the sun has streaks," he says, "then watch out, it'll sure be a rain."

BRITISH REPRESENTATIVE GOING TO MOSCOW

London, June 7 (AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain announced today that a representative of the foreign office would go to Moscow to conduct direct negotiations on the proposed mutual assistance pact among Great Britain, France and Soviet Russia. The prime minister told commons that in the last exchange of views with Moscow there was general agreement as to the main objects to be attained, but details still remained to be worked out. He said the British government was satisfied that the Soviet government was prepared to conclude an agreement on the basis of full reciprocity.

ADMITS KILLING PARENTS IN ESTATE ARGUMENT

Vining, Minn., June 7 (AP)—Alvin Rix, 21-year-old farmer, calmly told Sheriff J. C. Henkes early today how he shot and killed his mother and father and possibly fatally wounded a 13-year-old brother, Carl, after an argument Tuesday over an estate. "It's a bad thing," the sheriff quoted him as saying, "but I just got mad and decided to kill them all and be done with it." Rix, against whom no charges had been filed, was quoted by the sheriff as saying he went to see his father about getting $1,000 bequeathed to him by his late grandfather.

Today's Talk

By George Matthew Adams

THE WILLING MIND

There is no more pleasant privilege in the communication between people than to talk with a willing mind — one that is open and ready to receive truth, or to accept without argument, just so long as there is no higher evidence for acceptance.

We all own a certain pride in knowledge, but we must not forget that most of this knowledge is a result of listening, of selecting, and pondering for a solution closest to the truth.

The willing mind is volatile. It hunts. It investigates. It adventures. It is the happiest of minds, too, because it is not bound with prejudice and intolerance. It seeks to know.

There is no obstruction of thought that flows through the willing mind. It sifts and cleans, letting the chaff follow the wind, keeping only that which nourishes.

The astounding thing about all that Shakespeare wrote is that he had such a willing mind — everything in life seemed to flow through it, and his genius for absorption and netting the simplest traits of human nature is shown in all that he wrote. That is why his works are so immortal. That is why all that he wrote will forever remain modern.

The willing mind is a ready mind. It accepts life's values in their right proportion. The reason why so many people are unhappy is that they overvalue non-essentials and undervalue essentials.

Where there is genuineness and a lack of all conceit, sincerity and a willing mind to accept all cards served and to play the game — win or lose — that's living the triumphant life heroically.

Two Against Love

Chapter 33

ARSON

NAUSEATING odor rose from the burned wood and mixed with the fog.

With powerful flashlights and hand axes the men went through the smoking ruins, searching for smoldering ruins. Geoff, Thorn-dyke, and Nola joined Jocelyn and Mrs. Mack. Each one advanced a different theory as to the fire's origin, but their premises were knocked into a cockle shell when one of the firemen emerged from the wreckage with an empty kerosene can from which extended a length of blackened hemp.

He eyed them all accusingly. "Somebody deliberately started this fire!" he growled. "I'd say it was planned and set by a professional firebug!"

Jocelyn gasped. The man turned to her. "What do you know about this, Miss?"

"Nothing—except—" "Except what? Listen, lady, if there's an arsonist around here we've got to get him before he has the whole county on fire! Come on, speak up!"

"I'm not sure this means anything—" she hesitated, then told him about her suspicious boarder. "Sounds like our man." He gave orders to search the property.

Frightened now, Jocelyn recalled how interested the little man had been in the fog and in the seclusion of Sealiff. But before she had time to relate any of this two husky firemen appeared from the stable, dragging the weeping Mr. Jones between them.

"Sure I did it," Jones was saying. "Never figured you'd get here so quick to put it out—would've made a beautiful bonfire—beautiful!"

Rough questioning elicited further facts. He had served a five-year term for arson at San Quentin. Aliens had pronounced him a pyromaniac and recommended an asylum, but the state had decided he knew right from wrong and should be incarcerated in prison. Jones himself told all of this in detail, obviously enjoying his moment in the spotlight.

"Come on you! You'll be in an asylum for good this time!" As they led him away, weeping once more at the failure of his "bonfire," the Macks' old car rattled into the driveway and Bob and Gretchen jumped out.

In the midst of excited explanations Gretchen cried, "Where is Betsy? Gramp?"

"Gramp wouldn't go far away on his crutches," Tally soothed. "He's probably up in his room. Betsy and Tex are sure to be with him."

"I'll run up and see," Bob said. He returned a few minutes later, the answer plainly written on his distraught face. "Nobody in the house. Didn't any of you see them around here?"

The uneasy circle exchanged glances. "No," Tally rasped. "Too much excitement. Besides, the fire wasn't any where near them."

"But . . . were they . . . near the fire?" Jocelyn asked.

"Badly Burned" Alarmed, apprehensive, the group split into ones and twos and began a search of the house and grounds after agreeing upon a signal to be given when the lost were found. Jocelyn fond herself paired off with Tally. Stealing a look at him she saw that every exposed bit of his skin was covered with a film of soot and his clothes were scorched and wet.

"You ought to go in and go to bed," she said. "You're the only one who did anything to save the house. We'd have lost everything if it hadn't been for your courage. Are you sure you are all right?"

He brushed her words aside; said: "I've got to find Gramp and Betsy. Come on if you're going with me. It doesn't seem to make sense but we'd better start combing the fruit orchards."

There was no need, now, of going around the eight-foot fence. There was no fence. There was no vegetable garden.

"I'm sorry about the garden," she said, touching his arm. He winced, either from physical or mental pain. She had no way of telling.

"Thank heaven, it didn't get to the chickens," he muttered, his voice still hoarse from smoke.

From then on they trekked through the orchards in a silence broken only to call the names of the missing ones. Jocelyn stumbled over the rough earth, feeling drugged and faint with weariness. She seemed to be plodding on and on in a nightmare. Her eyes burned from straining into the fog-laden darkness; her ears ached from straining for the signal that would announce all was well.

In the gray dawn both families gathered once more by the charred black ruins in the back of the house. All of their faces were haggard. Low voices worried: "They might have been trapped in the garden . . . they might have been smothered with smoke . . . they might have . . ."

Suddenly through the gray mist came a querulous old voice. "What in tarnation's all the fuss about?"

Gramp, hobbling on his crutches, tagged by Betsy and Tex, materialized before their eyes. Gretchen snatched Betsy into her arms and covered the bewildered child's face with kisses.

"You worried us to death, Gramp," Mrs. Mack scolded, tears running down her face. "Where were you all night?"

"Well . . ." Gramp stopped to relieve himself of tobacco juice, then continued. "Betsy came a-runnin' in and says there's a fire and she's scared. She wants to get out o' the house. I couldn't do no good with these here legs o' mine, so I just up and takes her and Tex down to that empty cottage way off on t'other side o' the driveway, and we jest naturally went to sleep. That's all."

Tally broke in quietly: "I got burned a little, folks . . . you better get me a doctor . . ."

He fell to the ground before anyone could catch him.

Once more that night a siren shrilled through the fog and drew up at Sealiff. The ambulance doctor made a superficial examination, frowned, and ordered Tally removed to the hospital in Santa Barbara.

Jocelyn spoke to the doctor before going into Tally's room a few hours later.

"He's burned badly about the face and arms," he told her. "He has a high fever and his condition is, to say the least, dangerous."

"Not—not—he won't die?" she pleaded.

"I don't think so. He's healthy. Young. He's still unconscious, though."

"I won't disturb him, Doctor. Just—just let me stay in the room until he—he is out of danger."

"I Do Love You" Jocelyn stayed three days in the hospital. When, after long hours beside the bandaged man she drooped with fatigue, she let the nurse lead her to a bed in the room next to his. And in those three days she learned the truth in her heart. No longer, if Tally lived, would she stand back and let another woman take him. She would fight for him. Fight with every weapon a woman possessed!

The morning of the fourth day Nola stood in the doorway of his room and looked at Jocelyn with wondering eyes. "You haven't been home at all," she said.

Jocelyn advanced toward her, a declaration of war written on her determined face.

"I'm not coming home," she announced. "I'm going to stay here until he's out of danger. Then I'm going to tell him I love him! Nola, I don't care how much you want him—I'm going to try and marry him the minute he can sign his name to a marriage license!"

Nola laughed softly. "I did want him, Lyn, but I never had a chance. He always loved you and I knew it, but I thought I still had an advantage because of your stubbornness. I knew I had lost, though, that night he left me and went to you because he thought you might be frightened. I guess I really faced the truth that night . . . oh, why mourn? We wouldn't have clicked, anyhow. I'm not a farmer's wife and he isn't a rich woman's pet. Last night Thorn and I had a long talk . . . I care for him, Lyn. He's the kind of husband I want.

We are going to be married as soon as you can get away from here long enough to be a bridesmaid . . ."

"Thorn loves you," Jocelyn said simply. "I think you will be happy together."

Nola's smile was content. "Yes, Lyn. Thorn loves me. First thing on our program is the rehabilitation of the thousand acres of Texas he bought. I think it can be done, too, with the help of the soil conservation department of the government. After that . . . well, who knows?"

When the door had closed quietly Jocelyn resumed her place beside Tally. Suddenly, she laid her cheek against his hand. "I—I love you so," she whispered. "I—I've been such a fool!"

His hand moved. She raised her chin, saw his eyes were open, saw he was conscious at last.

"How—how long has it been?" he murmured through the swathing bandages about his head.

"Four days. Oh, Tally, it seems like four years."

"I guess I'll have to start my farm all over again," he sighed.

"You don't have to," she said meekly. "We can marry and sell Sealiff and have enough money to do as we please."

"No." His voice was so weak she could scarcely hear him. She leaned over him, her face so close to his she could feel his breath on her cheek. "I—I won't marry any woman—for any reason except I love her and—and she loves me—house or no house—"

"I do love you, Tally—house or no house."

His hand closed over hers and she knew then that Nola had been right. "Then," he said, "let's work together—never sell the house—never."

"Never."

Gently, tenderly, her lips found his and somehow, although handicapped by bandages, his arms crept about her and held her very close.

Chapter One

Game In Hearts

It was hot, hot enough to melt the bristles off an aluminum pig. Manhattan, with its network of streets and towering buildings, might have been likened unto a waffle-iron. Such of the citizenry as were abroad moved without enthusiasm, the male representation fanning boiled-lobster faces with straw hats. Even the motor cars seemed affected. They rolled slowly through clouds of steamy glaze that danced off their radiators and their horns made ho-hum sounds. June in New York! Heat-wave time in Gotham!

On the terrace of a building high above Fifth avenue sat four young gentlemen in white linen suits. A table separated these gentlemen one from the other and upon the table were two decks of cards, and four tall, frothy, lemon-colored glasses. For this terrace was part of the drinking arrangements provided for the membership of the exclusive Penguin club and the young gentlemen were all Penguins in more or less good standing.

U. S. OFFICIALS READY TO GREET BRITISH RULERS

Niagara Falls, N. Y., June 7 (AP)

Armed forces of two nations smiled across the international border today in a joint mission of peace — protection of King George VI, who will make history tonight as the first reigning British monarch ever to set foot on United States soil.

Soldiers of the regular Army, National Guardsmen and police of the United States eagerly awaited the task to be turned over to them by Canadian troops and constabulary when the King and Queen Elizabeth cross the border, unfortified for more than a century.

Weeks of preparation have preceded the entry ceremony, expected to last scarcely five minutes. Its climax will be a welcome extended by Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

After a brief visit in Niagara Falls, Ontario, ending the first phase of their tour of Canada, the royal couple will ride their blue and silver train across Whirlpool Rapids bridge and stop under a train shed in time-erected Suspension Bridge station.

The sovereigns will descend and be greeted by Sir Ronald Lindsay, British ambassador to the United States, who will present Secretary Hull and Mrs. Hull in a ceremony scheduled for 9:35 p. m., E.S.T. The royal party and Secretary Hull's reception committee then will entrain for Washington, D. C.

At the middle of the bridge United States Army men will "take over" protection of the royal route.

Unofficial instructions to United States citizens wishing to see the King and Queen advised them to cross the border into Canada and see the royal procession through the streets of Niagara Falls, Ontario.

The actual reception of the royal visit will occur in a polished and refurbished private room in the old station. The room has been furnished with smart new furniture. Its walls and those of the station have been hung with flags and bunting of the two nations.

Two regiments of the New York National Guard have been detailed to stations along the route from here through Buffalo to the Pennsylvania state line. City and state police are assigned to supplementary posts.

Railroad officials ordered all switches spiked to avoid any possibility of an interruption or mishap during passage of the train.

A shift in railroad jurisdiction will be accomplished in Buffalo where locomotives of the New York Central railroad will be uncoupled and those of the Pennsylvania lines attached for the trip to Baltimore and Washington.

Railroad officials issued a blanket order to all trainmen who will be employed in the switching of the royal train:

"Don't disturb the King and Queen!"

ONE FISH REMAINS

Lancaster, Pa., June 7 (AP).—All the goldfish on the Franklin and Marshall college campus weren't swallowed up in the recent goldfish gulping sweepstakes. A live one, garnished with parsley, turned up among gifts annually presented to faculty members by the senior class.
